Maid Brigade Opens Greenwich Office and Is Hiring in Fairfield County

The White Plains-based house cleaning company, marking 30 years in business this year, is adding a local base for the Connecticut customers it has served from New York.

GREENWICH, Conn., September 10th, 2026 — Maid Brigade has opened an office in Greenwich and is hiring cleaning team members for Fairfield County.

The company was founded in Chappaqua, New York, in 1996 and marks 30 years in business this year. It has cleaned more than 535,000 homes and was named Best House Cleaning Company in the 2026 Best of Westchester Awards, its second consecutive win in the category.

The Greenwich office gives the company a base for teams working in Fairfield County, which it expects will shorten travel between homes and support local hiring.

“We’ve been cleaning homes in Fairfield County for a long time, and doing it from across the state line,” said Robin Murphy, founder and Chief Cleaning Officer of Maid Brigade. “Having people based here means our teams spend less of the day in a car and more of it doing the work.”

Maid Brigade employs its cleaning teams directly rather than using independent contractors. Every team member is trained, insured, bonded and background checked before entering a customer’s home. The company has been named one of the Best Places to Work in Westchester for three consecutive years.

The company cleans with electrolyzed water, made on site from tap water, salt and an electrical charge rather than conventional bottled cleaning chemicals. Murphy introduced the approach to the national Maid Brigade system in 2018 and it was later adopted across the brand. It is residue-free and fragrance-free, with no harsh chemical fumes or lingering scent on the surfaces families touch every day.

“A clean home isn’t a luxury and it isn’t a chore,” Murphy said. “It’s one of the most practical ways to take care of your life. I believed that in 1996, and I still do.”
